Arbitration Experience

Manjiao has extensive experience of international arbitration, and of dispute settlement broadly. He appears on the panel of a dozen major arbitration institutions in China and abroad, such as China International Economic and Trade Arbitration Commission, Singapore International Arbitration Center, Beijing International Arbitration Center and Shenzhen Court of International Arbitration, to list some.

Manjiao has served as arbitrator (party-nominated or institution-appointed, presiding, sole and emergency arbitrator) in nearly a hundred international, foreign-related and domestic arbitration cases under different arbitration rules, applicable substantive and procedural rules. Many of these cases involve transnational trade, investment and other complicated business and legal issues in a wide range of economic sectors, and some are conducted in English. He frequently serves as advisor to leading law firms and multinational corporations on international arbitration and international commercial law issues, and has served as expert, expert witness and amicus curiae in a number of arbitration-related proceedings before Chinese and U.S. courts.

Manjiao is also a public international law expert, and has experience of WTO litigation, investor-state arbitration, treaty negotiation and national law- and policy-making.
